JEFFERSON
PREPARATORY
HIGH SCHOOL

When we speak with parents who are considering Jefferson Preparatory High School (JPHS) for their students, one of the questions that is asked most often is about classical education. Parents want to know exactly what the classical education approach is, and how it benefits their students.

Briefly, a classical education approach is research based and focused on how students learn best, not just test memorization. English, literature, foreign language, math, history, science, performing arts, career and technical education—these rigorous academic offerings equip students for an outstanding future. We also offer a full array of sports and clubs to provide opportunity for students to explore their interests. The Arizona Department of Education awarded JPHS 20 of 20 points for student graduation rates, and JPHS students exceed the national average for college enrollment and completion.

Proof of academic excellence is found in the success of our students. Our students excel year after year. It's why U.S. News and World Report has ranked Jefferson Preparatory High School as one of America's best high schools three years in a row. In addition to rigorous classical curriculum, we credit their success to a personalized, positive educational environment. Class sizes are smaller than typical brick and mortar high school classes. Classes are teacher led, with desks facing the teacher instead of being grouped together. Research illustrates that personal teacher instruction and attention plus individual student responsibility instead of group efforts positively impact student outcomes.
